

Park Entrances

Welcome guests and customers with one of our grand entryways. This particular park entrance is a complex and highly detailed entryway for Siegfried and Roy's Secret Garden. This entryway incorporates impressive doors, signage, and numerous bas relief carvings. Park entryways are common architectural features on churches, parks, government buildings, and hospitality locations. On churches, architectural entryways can be enhanced with moldings and bas relief featuring religious symbols or scenes. In hospitality locations, the entryways can help visitors navigate through large resorts and find specific locations, serving a practical as well as an aesthetic function. All of our park entryways are available in a number of materials, textures, and finishes. Your guests will be amazed at the details. If you want understated and simple, our GFRC entryways are available in a special finish that can be painted with almost any color of paint. If you're feeling more daring, you might choose a GFRP entryway that has the appearance of nickel and an aged metal finish. Our park entrances can replicate the look of popular materials like terra cotta and limestone - you can get all the beauty of these materials without the excessive weight and cost. Let us help you design your own park entrance today.
